

fragments and run ons worksheets

Fragments and run-ons worksheets are essential educational tools designed to help students understand and correct common grammatical errors in their writing. These worksheets focus on two primary issues in sentence structure: fragments, which are incomplete sentences, and run-ons, which are sentences that improperly connect independent clauses. By mastering these concepts, students can enhance their writing clarity and coherence, ultimately leading to better communication skills.

Understanding Sentence Structure

To grasp the importance of fragments and run-ons, it is essential first to understand what constitutes a complete sentence. A complete sentence must have a subject, a verb, and express a complete thought.

Components of a Complete Sentence

1. Subject: The subject of a sentence tells us who or what the sentence is about.
2. Verb: The verb expresses action or a state of being.
3. Complete Thought: The sentence must convey a full idea without leaving the reader hanging.

When any of these components are missing, the sentence may be classified as a fragment. Conversely, when two independent clauses are improperly connected without appropriate punctuation or conjunctions, a run-on sentence occurs.

Identifying Fragments

Fragments are incomplete sentences that lack the necessary components to stand alone. They may be phrases or dependent clauses that cannot function independently. Recognizing fragments is crucial for developing strong writing skills.

Common Types of Fragments

1. Dependent Clauses: These begin with subordinating conjunctions (e.g., because, since, although) and do not express a complete thought.
- Example: "Because I was late."
2. Phrase Fragments: These are groups of words that do not contain a subject and verb combination.
- Example: "Running through the park."

3. Incorrectly Punctuated Sentences: Sometimes, a sentence can be incorrectly punctuated, creating a fragment.

- Example: "The dog barking loudly."

How to Fix Fragments

To correct fragments, you can:

- Combine with a Nearby Sentence: Link the fragment to a complete sentence.

- Add Missing Components: Include the subject or verb to make it complete.

Example:

- Fragment: "When we went to the store."

- Correction: "When we went to the store, we bought groceries."

Understanding Run-On Sentences

Run-on sentences occur when two or more independent clauses are joined improperly, leading to confusion and ambiguity. This error can often be identified by the absence of appropriate punctuation or conjunctions.

Types of Run-On Sentences

1. Fused Sentences: Two independent clauses are joined without any punctuation or conjunction.

- Example: "I love to read I don't have much time."

2. Comma Splice: Two independent clauses are incorrectly joined by a comma without a coordinating conjunction.

- Example: "I love to read, I don't have much time."

How to Fix Run-On Sentences

Here are several strategies to correct run-on sentences:

- Use a Period: Split the run-on into two separate sentences.

- Correction: "I love to read. I don't have much time."

- Use a Semicolon: Connect the independent clauses with a semicolon.

- Correction: "I love to read; I don't have much time."

- Add a Coordinating Conjunction: Use a conjunction (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so) to connect the clauses.

- Correction: "I love to read, but I don't have much time."
