Eligibility Requirements

Before taking the Georgia Life and Health Insurance Exam, candidates must meet certain eligibility requirements. These requirements ensure that individuals are prepared to handle the responsibilities associated with selling life and health insurance products.

Age and Residency

To be eligible for the exam, candidates must be at least 18 years old. Additionally, they should be legal residents of Georgia or have a business presence in the state. This residency requirement is critical as it ensures that agents are familiar with state-specific regulations and policies.

Pre-licensing Education

Georgia mandates that candidates complete a pre-licensing education course before sitting for the exam. This course covers essential topics related to life and health insurance, including policy types, underwriting, and ethical practices. The course can be completed through various approved providers, and it typically consists of at least 20 hours of instruction.

Background Check

Additionally, candidates must undergo a background check. This is to ensure that individuals seeking to become licensed agents do not have a criminal history that would disqualify them from holding an insurance license.
