Historical Context

Henrik Ibsen, often referred to as the father of modern drama, wrote "A Doll's House" during a period marked by significant social change in Europe. The late 19th century was characterized by:

- The rise of the feminist movement, advocating for women's rights and suffrage.
- Industrialization, which transformed societal structures and family dynamics.
- Romanticism, which influenced the portrayal of individual psychology and emotional depth in literature.

These factors created a backdrop for Ibsen's exploration of personal and societal conflicts, particularly regarding the roles and expectations of women.

Plot Summary

"A Doll's House" unfolds in the Helmer household, where Nora Helmer, the protagonist, initially appears to be a carefree and somewhat naïve woman. The play begins during the Christmas season, symbolizing both festivity and the façade of happiness that cloaks deeper issues.

The plot progresses through several key developments:

1. Nora's Secret: Early in the play, it is revealed that Nora has secretly borrowed money to finance her husband's medical treatment, forging her father's signature to do so. This act of desperation sets the stage for the unfolding drama.
2. Torvald's Promotion: Nora's husband, Torvald Helmer, is about to be promoted at the bank where he works. He embodies traditional masculine values and views Nora as a child, often referring to her with pet names that reinforce her subordinate status.
3. The Arrival of Krogstad: Nils Krogstad, the bank employee who lent Nora the money, threatens to expose her secret if Torvald does not keep him employed. This tension heightens as Nora struggles to prevent her husband from discovering her deception.

4. The Climax: As the narrative unfolds, Nora's self-awareness grows. The climax occurs when Torvald learns of the secret and reacts with anger and disappointment, revealing the true nature of their relationship.

5. Nora's Transformation: In the play's conclusion, Nora experiences a profound awakening. She recognizes the limitations placed upon her by her marriage and society, leading her to make a radical decision about her future.
