

jamestowne society qualifying ancestors

Jamestowne Society Qualifying Ancestors is a topic of great interest for genealogists, historians, and individuals seeking to connect with their ancestral roots. The Jamestowne Society, founded in 1956, is dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the history of the early settlers of Jamestown, Virginia, the first permanent English settlement in North America. This society recognizes and honors the descendants of those early settlers who arrived between 1607 and 1699. In this article, we will explore the criteria for qualifying ancestors, the application process, and the significance of being recognized by the Jamestowne Society.

Understanding the Jamestowne Society

The Jamestowne Society was established to foster interest in the history of Jamestown and to promote the study of genealogy related to its early settlers. The society supports various historical and educational initiatives that shed light on this critical period in American history. Membership is open to direct descendants of individuals who lived in Virginia during the colonial period.

Significance of Jamestown

Jamestown holds a unique place in American history as it was the first successful English settlement in the New World. Established in 1607, it became a focal point for the spread of English influence in North America. The early settlers faced numerous challenges, including conflicts with Native Americans, harsh weather, and food shortages. Understanding the experiences of these settlers provides valuable insight into the development of the United States.

Qualifying Ancestors

To become a member of the Jamestowne Society, individuals must prove their lineage to a qualifying ancestor who was present in Virginia during the specified timeframe. This section will delve into the requirements for qualifying ancestors and provide a list of known individuals who meet these criteria.

Criteria for Qualifying Ancestors

To qualify as an ancestor for the Jamestowne Society, the individual must:

1. Have Arrived in Virginia: The ancestor must have arrived in Virginia between 1607 and 1699 and be part of the population during that time.

2. Be an Original Settler or Their Descendant: The individual must be an original settler of Jamestown or a descendant of an original settler. This includes those who were part of the Virginia colony and contributed to its establishment and growth.
3. Documentation: Genealogical proof must be provided to establish the line of descent from the qualifying ancestor to the applicant. This documentation may include birth, marriage, and death certificates, wills, and other relevant records.

List of Notable Qualifying Ancestors

The following is a list of some notable individuals who are recognized as qualifying ancestors by the Jamestowne Society:

- John Smith: An English soldier and explorer who played a crucial role in the establishment of Jamestown.
- Pocahontas: A Native American woman associated with the colonial settlement, known for her relationship with John Rolfe.
- George Yeardley: The first elected governor of Virginia, who contributed significantly to the colony's development.
- William Claiborne: A prominent figure in early Virginia politics and trade.

The Application Process

The application process for membership in the Jamestowne Society is designed to ensure that all claims of descent from qualifying ancestors are thoroughly vetted. Below are the steps involved in the application process:

Step-by-Step Application Process

1. Research Your Ancestry: Begin by gathering all relevant information about your family tree. This includes names, dates, and places associated with your ancestors.
